Foreword

MAINE TOWNS AND COUNTIES What was What, Where and When

"Can anyone tell me in which county the following towns were located during the years 1820-1860?" For genealogists and local historians, this is an important problem. Much of their work is done with census and court records, land and probate records, which are located in the county seat or shiretown of each county. If a person were to be researching a land transaction which occurred in New Sharon in 1817, it would be important to know that New Sharon was located in Kennebec County in 1817, and that the original record would be held in Augusta, Kennebec's shiretown, and not in Farmington, the shiretown of Franklin County, where New Sharon is now located. Similarly, if a person were searching for ancestors in the 1830 census for Lewiston, the search should be conducted in Lincoln County, not in Androscoggin, where Lewiston is now located.

Additionally, if one has a letter from one's great-grandmother, saying that she was visiting her brother in Pride's Corner or Malta, many maps would fail to show the locations of those places; Pride's Corner is a village within the city of Westbrook, but Malta was a former name for present-day Windsor.

The information gathered for every minor civil division (city, town, plantation, or unorganized township) includes the following, although not all types of information are found for every MCD.

- 1 - The name of the MCD;
- 2 - The present county of the MCD;
- 3 - The date of plantation organization and/or deorganization;
- 4 - The date of town incorporation and/or surrender;
- 5 - The date of the city charter;
- 6 - The parent town or city;
- 7 - Former name(s) of the MCD;
- 8 - Other MCD's which were part of this one, in whole or part;
- 9 - Local names, including villages, railroad stations, post offices, and any other type of name applied to an area where people lived. Purely physical features, and very obvious place names such as North Windham, within the town of Windham, are not listed, unless they are the names of MCD's themselves, such as Mount Katahdin Township;
- 10 - The county or counties of which the MCD was a part, from earliest days to the present.

The reader will also find a list of abbreviations, information on the ancient and present counties of Maine, county seats, a brief description of the organization and purposes of MCD's, and a complete index of all place names in the town listing section beginning on page 1.

If any readers know of a place name which has been omitted, the author would appreciate knowing about it.

PRESENT COUNTIES OF MAINE AND THEIR FUNCTIONS

YORK COUNTY, organized 20 Nov 1652, seat at Alfred.

York County was established by the General Court of the Massachusetts Bay Colony, as an effort to organize the control of Massachusetts Bay over Maine. York County encompassed at one time, the entire portion of the present state of Maine which was under Massachusetts' control.

The county seat was at York, 1652-1716; Kittery, 1717-18; York, 1718-35; York and Falmouth (now Portland) were joint seats 1735-60; York, 1760-1802; York and Alfred were joint seats, 1802-13; Alfred, 1813 on.

Records at Alfred include all extant records for the state before 1760, and sections of present-day Oxford County until 1805. Many of these records have been published under the titles York Deeds and Maine Wills.

CUMBERLAND COUNTY, organized 1 Nov 1760, seat at Portland.

Cumberland County was established from York, running from Scarboro to Brunswick, then generally following the Saco and Androscoggin Rivers northward, ultimately to the "Height of Land", the dividing line between Maine and Quebec. Major changes in Cumberland's boundaries include the transfer of land to Androscoggin in 1854, and the transfer of the town of Otisfield to Oxford in 1978.

The county seat has been at Portland since 1760, although the town was called Falmouth until 1786, when it separated, with part becoming known as Portland. Records at Portland include portions of Oxford and Androscoggin records. Early Cumberland records are at Alfred.

LINCOLN COUNTY, organized 1 Nov 1760, seat at Wiscasset.

Lincoln County was also established from York, running from Bath to the New Brunswick (then Nova Scotia) border, and north to the "Height of Land". Lincoln was a parent county in whole or in part to Hancock, Washington, Kennebec, Somerset, Piscataquis, Penobscot, Androscoggin, Sagadahoc, Waldo, Knox and Aroostook. In succession, Hancock and Washington took most of Lincoln's eastern lands in 1789; Kennebec took most of the northern lands in 1799; Androscoggin and Sagadahoc took land in 1854; and Knox took land in 1860.

The county seat has always been Wiscasset; the town of Pownalborough, designated the seat in 1760, was divided and renamed Wiscasset prior to 1802. Wiscasset holds records for parts of all the counties listed above prior to 1789 or 1799. Early Lincoln records are at Alfred.

HANCOCK COUNTY, organized 25 Jun 1789, seat at Ellsworth.

Hancock County was established from Lincoln, consisting mostly of the area from about Rockland to Gouldsboro, and north to the border. It was the parent county of Penobscot, Piscataquis, Aroostook, Knox, and Waldo.

The county seat was Penobscot, 1789-96; Castine, 1796-1837; and Ellsworth, since 1837. Records between 1760 and 1789 are in Wiscasset; before 1760, records are in Alfred. Ellsworth also holds many records for Penobscot and Waldo, as well as parts of Knox, Piscataquis, and Aroostook.

WASHINGTON COUNTY, organized 25 Jun 1789, seat at Machias.

Washington County was also established from Lincoln, consisting of the area from Gouldsboro, east and north to Canada. It was the parent of eastern Aroostook, and also transferred land to Hancock and Penobscot at various times.

The county seat has always been Machias, which holds records of eastern Aroostook before 1831 or 1839, since portions of present-day Aroostook were transferred to Penobscot in 1831. Early Washington records are in Wiscasset to 1760, and in Alfred before 1760.

KENNEBEC COUNTY, organized 1 Apr 1799, seat at Augusta.

Kennebec County was also established from Lincoln. The present southern boundary of Kennebec became the northern bounds of Lincoln in 1799, and Kennebec then ran north to the border. Much of Kennebec was set off to form Somerset County in 1809, Franklin in 1838, and Androscoggin in 1854.

The county seat has always been Augusta, which holds records of the above mentioned counties until their organization. Early Kennebec records are in Wiscasset to 1760, and in Alfred before 1760.

OXFORD COUNTY, organized 1 May 1805, seat at South Paris.

Oxford County was established mostly from York and partly from Cumberland, being that part of York County north of the Saco River. It also included parts of Franklin and Androscoggin until 1838 and 1854 respectively.

The county seat is at South Paris. Prior to 1902 it had been located in the village of Paris Hill. There are two land registries, at South Paris and Fryeburg. Fryeburg holds records for Brownfield, Denmark, Fryeburg, Hiram, Lovell, Porter, Stoneham, Stow and Sweden, with South Paris holding the rest of the county records. Oxford holds the records of those portions of Franklin and Androscoggin mentioned above. Early Oxford records are in Alfred and Portland.

SOMERSET COUNTY, organized 1 Jun 1809, seat at Skowhegan.

Somerset County was established from Kennebec, and was a parent county to parts of Franklin, Piscataquis, and Aroostook.

The county seat is at Skowhegan; prior to 1872, Norridgewock was the seat. Skowhegan holds records of parts of Franklin, Piscataquis, and Aroostook mentioned above. Early Somerset records are in Augusta, Wiscasset, and Alfred.

PENOBSCOT COUNTY, organized 1 Apr 1816, seat at Bangor.

Penobscot County was established mostly from Hancock, and was a parent county to parts of Piscataquis and Aroostook. There were frequent land swaps and shifts between Penobscot, and Somerset, Hancock and Washington.

The county seat has always been at Bangor. Records there include parts of Aroostook and Piscataquis. Early records of the Penobscot area are in Ellsworth before 1814, Wiscasset before 1789, and Alfred before 1760.

WALDO COUNTY, organized 3 Jul 1827, seat at Belfast.

Waldo County was established from Hancock, being that part of Hancock west of the Penobscot River.

The county seat has always been at Belfast, which holds records for parts of Knox as well as Waldo. Early Waldo records are in Ellsworth before 1827, Wiscasset before 1789, and Alfred before 1760.

PISCATAQUIS COUNTY, organized 30 Apr 1838, seat at Dover-Foxcroft.

Piscataquis County was established from Penobscot and Somerset, and there were occasional boundary changes between Piscataquis and these two counties. In 1844, the northern part of Piscataquis was joined to Aroostook.

The county seat is Dover-Foxcroft, having been located in Dover until that town was joined to Foxcroft. Early eastern Piscataquis records from 1814 to 1838 will be found in Bangor and western Piscataquis records from 1809 to 1838 will be found in Skowhegan. Even earlier records will be found in Ellsworth (1789-1814) and Augusta (1799-1809) for the respective areas. Extremely early western records (1789-1799) would be in Wiscasset, as well as records for the entire area from 1760 to 1789. It is doubtful that earlier Piscataquis records exist.

FRANKLIN COUNTY, organized 9 May 1838, seat at Farmington.

Franklin County was established from Oxford, Kennebec, and Somerset, with substantially its present boundaries.

The county seat is Farmington. Records before 1838 will be found in South Paris (western Franklin from 1805 to 1838), Augusta (southern Franklin from 1799 to 1838 and eastern Franklin from 1799 to 1809), and Skowhegan (eastern Franklin from 1809 to 1838). Earlier records for western Franklin will be found in Portland, 1760-1805, or Alfred, to 1805; for southern and eastern Franklin, Wiscasset would have records from 1760 to 1799.

AROOSTOOK COUNTY, organized 1 May 1839, seat at Houlton.

Aroostook County, called "The County", by most Mainers, was established from Washington and Penobscot, and enlarged from Penobscot, Piscataquis, and Somerset. It is the largest county in Maine, and the US east of the Mississippi, being the size of Connecticut and Rhode Island together.

The county seat is Houlton, but there are two registries, the one in Madawaska handling transactions in the northern part of the county, roughly north of Caribou, Limestone, New Sweden, Perham, Portage Lake, Wade, Washburn, Westmanland and Woodland.

Early Aroostook records will be found in Machias (1789 to 1839), or in Bangor (1814-1839). It is doubtful that earlier records exist.

ANDROSCOGGIN COUNTY, organized 31 Mar 1854, seat at Auburn.

Androscoggin County was organized from Cumberland (Auburn, Durham, Mechanic Falls, Minot, Poland), Lincoln (Lewiston, Lisbon, Sabattus), Kennebec (Livermore Falls, Greene, Leeds, Wales), and Oxford (Turner, Livermore). Records prior to 1854 are found in Portland, Wiscasset or Bath which was the western Lincoln registry from 1826 to 1854, Augusta, and South Paris. Lewiston was declared the temporary seat until in a referendum Auburn was selected.

SAGadahoc COUNTY, organized 4 Apr 1854, seat at Bath.

Sagadahoc County was organized from Lincoln, having been the western registry for Lincoln. The seat is Bath, which contains all records since 1826. The Register of Deeds for Sagadahoc reported (1973), "Our Sagadahoc County Records go back to 1854, and then we have forty-three volumes of Lincoln Western District that go to 1826. Many of the Bath and Sagadahoc Records are also in Lincoln County Registry, starting in 1826 and going back, But I am not sure how far they go."

Early records are in Wiscasset (1760-1826), or Alfred (before 1760).

KNOX COUNTY, organized 1 Apr 1860, seat at Rockland.

Knox County was organized from Lincoln and Waldo, and has had few major boundary changes, Isle au Haut being annexed from Hancock in 1913. The seat is Rockland, which holds copied records from Lincoln, Waldo and Hancock of the "Waldo Lands", from 1760 to 1926. Original records of the eastern registry of Lincoln from 1836 to 1860 are also in Rockland.

Early records are in Belfast (eastern Knox, 1827-1860), Wiscasset (western Knox, 1760-1836, eastern Knox 1760-1789), Ellsworth (eastern Knox 1789-1827), or Alfred (any records before 1760).

ANCIENT COUNTIES OF MAINE

Maine presently has sixteen counties, organized between 1652 and 1860. But in the 17th Century, several other "counties" were organized. None of these endured, and several were merely wishful thinking on the part of European land speculators and adventurers. Inadequate mapping, Indian wars, overlapping claims, and general disorganization made for great confusion in describing these counties, however.

The ancient counties of Maine were:

CANADA, in 1636, encompassed land between the Kennebec and St Croix Rivers, north to the St Lawrence; with the exception of the Pemaquid Patent, the area came under the jurisdiction of New York in 1665, and was renamed CORNWALL.

CORNWALL, 1665-74, 1683-91, seat of government at Sheepscot, renamed New Dartmouth (now Newcastle), encompassed land between the Kennebec and Penobscot Rivers. The name was changed to DEVON(SHIRE) in 1673. In 1683, the boundaries were changed to include all the area from the Kennebec to Nova Scotia, now New Brunswick. The county became a dependency of PEMAQUID, and was also called the PROVINCE OF SAGADAHOC, SAGADAHOC TERRITORY, and OLD YORK COUNTY. It was at the same time part of Massachusetts Bay and New York from about 1674 to 1686, when it was dissolved.

DEVON(SHIRE), a later name for CORNWALL, 1674-86; came under the jurisdiction of Massachusetts Bay in 1674, when New York was retaken by the Dutch. Evidently, the area was reclaimed by the Duke of York almost immediately, and for several years, conflicting orders were made by both the Massachusetts General Court and the Duke of York.

GEORGIA, Province of; 1729-32, organized by Col David Dunbar, to include all territory east of St Georges River; he established several towns in the Bristol area, but was forced to abandon the area by the Muscongus (or Pemaquid) Proprietors in 1732. These towns today are the villages of Pemaquid, New Harbor, Bristol, and Walpole all within the town of Bristol.

LYGONIA, originally part of the Province of MAINE, in 1646 consisted of land between the Mousam or Kennebunk, and the Kennebec Rivers. Became part of Massachusetts Bay, and York County, in 1658.

NEW IRELAND, proposed British colony in 1780. It would have included the land between the Penobscot and St. Croix Rivers but was never organized, as the area became part of the United States by the Treaty of Paris in 1783.

NEW SOMERSETSHIRE, 1635-39, included the area from the Piscataqua to the Kennebec River. The name was changed to the Province of MAINE in 1639, with its county seat at Gorgeana, now York.

PEMAQUID, originally a kingdom, with SAGADAHOC TERRITORY and MUSCONGUS as its dependencies, then a colony, finally a part of CORNWALL.

MAINE, in 1639, the area from the Piscataqua to the Kennebec River; as of 1659, the area from the Piscataqua to the Mousam or Kennebunk River, and 120 miles inland. MAINE became part of Massachusetts in 1652, becoming YORK COUNTY. The Province of MAINE contained the following counties about 1650: PISCATAQUA, now Kittery; ISLES OF SHOALS, now Kittery and Rye, NH; AGAMENTICUS, now York; CAPE PORPOISE, now Kennebunkport; SACO, now Biddeford, Saco and Old Orchard Beach; BLACK POINT, now part of Scarborough; SPURWINK, now part of Scarborough and Cape Elizabeth; CASCO, now part of Portland and Falmouth; PEJEPSCOT, now part of Brunswick.

SAGADAHOC TERRITORY, also called Pemaquid Colony, became part of Massachusetts in 1691, and was part of York County from 1716 to 1760.

YORK COUNTY originally consisted of the old Province of MAINE in 1652; LYGONIA, to the Kennebec, was added in 1658; the eastern boundary was extended to the St Georges River in 1665, and to the St Croix by 1692.

Researchers looking for records of these "counties" should consult the Maine Historical Society in Portland; the Maine State Library and Archives in Augusta; the Massachusetts Historical Society and Massachusetts State Archives in Boston; and the New York Historical Society and New York State Archives in Albany.

MINOR CIVIL DIVISIONS IN MAINE AND THEIR FUNCTIONS

Minor civil divisions (MCD's) in Maine are similar in nature to MCD's in the rest of New England, but are quite different from MCD's outside New England. In New England, the township is coexistent with the plantation, town, and city. That is, the geographical area of the township is the same as the others. For example, the township of Norway has the same geographic area as the town of Norway, and the township of Bangor has the same geographic area as the city of Bangor. In New England, then, the plantation, town, and city are geographically identical and coterminous with the township. There is only one city, town, or plantation within a township, although there may be several settled areas or villages. Thus, in New England, there is no portion of the state which is not within a plantation, town or city, except for the unorganized townships.

The COUNTY is operated by a board of commissioners, and generally has few functions today. The major one is that of police protection, through the county sheriff; the county seat also holds the county jail, the register of deeds and the probate court. Unlike counties outside New England, Maine counties have no vital records to speak of.

The CITY is operated under a city charter, and is often run by either a mayor or a city manager, with a city council or board of aldermen being the representative body. It is a civil body politic, has its own police and fire protection, its own school system, the power to tax property and residents, and is generally independent of state government.

The TOWN is often operated under a town charter, and is run by a town manager or board of selectmen, either with or without a town meeting. It also is a civil body politic, and if large enough, has its own public protection agencies, and the power to tax. Frequently, however, towns are too small to have anything but volunteer firefighters, and they are often served by the county sheriff's department. Frequently, they join together with other towns to form school districts. They are also generally independent of state government. In Maine there can only be one town within a township, unlike outside New England, where there can be several towns and cities within one township.

The PLANTATION usually has too few people to support most of the governmental services of a town or a city, and is taxed by the state. It often joins with other towns or plantations for school services, and relies on the county for police protection.

The TOWNSHIP, governmentally, has no organization, and are frequently referred to as "unorganized", or "wild lands." All government functions are taken care of by the state, and taxes are paid directly to the state.

There are two other local divisions encountered frequently in Maine, but they are of a very different nature than the other five. The DISTRICT, by definition, is a collection of other MCD's, given specific powers and obligations by the state. Examples in Maine include School Administrative Districts, Transit Districts, Sewerage Districts, and Water Districts, providing services which separate towns or cities couldn't afford by themselves. Finally, the VILLAGE, which is not considered a MCD because it is usually not organized, is often simply a built-up or settled area within one of the other MCD's. In rare cases, there is some village organization as a MCD, the best example being Ogunquit, which was an organized governmental unit within the town of Wells until 1978 when it became a town in its own right.

Of these, the city, town, plantation, district, and county are the only record producing entities. Cities, towns, and plantations hold birth, marriage, and death records, as well as records of civil government, including minutes of town meetings for example. Districts hold records pertinent to their specific function, i.e., school districts hold school records only. Townships hold no records, but usually transfer any records they might have held to the State Archives, in Augusta. Counties hold deeds, wills, guardianships, adoptions, records of incorporation, and similar records.
